

An Introduction to My Early Relational Trauma Informed Learning

A professional development course for mental health & community practitioners working with young families

Wednesday 3 March

Webinar

9.30am – 11.00am (AEDT)

Professor Jennifer McIntosh
The Bouverie Centre,
La Trobe University

Free

WEBINAR OVERVIEW

MERTIL is a self-paced, online training program for Early Childhood and Family Workforces, based on current Attachment Theory, Neurodevelopmental Science and Trauma Informed Practice. MERTIL offers training in the recognition of early trauma in the parent-child relationship and teaches options for effective, immediate response by frontline services.

Register for this live and free webinar to hear Professor Jennifer McIntosh, infant mental health specialist and co-developer of MERTIL, present an introduction to the MERTIL program.

You will also have the opportunity to ask questions in a Q&A segment. All registrations will receive a recording of the event.

THE WEBINAR WILL COVER

- Synthesis and development of MERTIL
- MERTIL's key learning objectives
- Applicability for those working with families with young children experiencing relational trauma
- MERTIL's workshop components

WHO WILL BENEFIT FROM MERTIL

Suitable for Early childhood and family wellbeing frontline practitioners such as Family and Child Health Nurses, Home visitors, Midwives, Psychiatrists, Psychologists, Social Workers, Family Support Workers, Child Protection Workers, Infant Mental Health Workers, General Practitioners, Allied Professions.

Register for webinar via Bouverie Centre at <http://bit.ly/intro-mertil-webinar>
Recording of webinar sent to all registrations
Learn more about MERTIL at www.mertil.com.au